2014-01-10 Sarah S.G. Frantz Despite the prejudices of critics, popular romance fiction remains a complex, dynamic genre. It consistently maintains the largest market share in the American publishing industry, even as it welcomes new subgenres like queer and BDSM romance. Digital publishing originated in erotic romance, and savvy online communities have exploded myths about the genre's readership. Romance scholarship now reflects this diversity, transformed by interdisciplinary scrutiny, new critical approaches, and an unprecedented international dialogue between authors, scholars, and fans. These eighteen essays investigate individual romance novels, authors, and websites, rethink the genre's history, and explore its interplay of convention and originality. By offering new twists in enduring debates, this collection inspires further inquiry into the emerging field of popular romance studies.

SAHARA KELLY Anasazi Lassie Nothing excites archaeology professor Midge Hayworth more than learning -- and fantasizing -- about ancient Native American cultures. Nothing except Professor Web Jones. With movie star looks and a chiseled body, he would never notice her, or so she thinks. But when he joins her research trip to the Tolikani Canyon, his interest isn't ancient cultures -- it's Midge. Ever since Web observed one of her lectures, he gets hard just thinking about the seductive curves and soft skin beneath her practical button-ups. When he catches her late one night nakedly indulging in the pleasures of a waterfall, he decides it's time they indulged their most primal fantasies together. VONNA HARPER Night of the Cougar Maka Bradshaw just wants a glimpse of the massive cougar her activist friend Cliff told her about. But when she reaches the forest where the wildcat roams, she learns the cougar mauled Cliff to death, and people in the nearby town aren't talking. Tocho, a tall, broad-shouldered man with long dark hair, is the most outspoken -- and most mysterious. Like an animal on the hunt, Tocho sneaks up on Maka at the cabin where she's staying. She knows she should be scared, but his virile presence freezes her...and ignites a raw, feral passion inside. He's come to stake his claim -- and to fulfill her carnal desires.
